A STUDENT GUIDE

Whether you’re a new student or a soon-to-be graduate, you need to be consistently aware of your loan status – and luckily there are tools online specifically designed to help keep you up to speed. The National Student Loan Data System, or NSLDS, is a federal website that utilizes your FAFSA login information to link up to your student loans.

With NSLDS, all of your federal student loan information can be conveniently found in one place. As you work through your collegiate years and beyond, it’s a smart idea to keep tabs on your student loan debt – in fact, we can’t emphasize the importance of this enough! But don’t stress. By taking advantage of the NSLDS website as a key resource, you can easily monitor your progress as you pay off your loans. Here’s a brief rundown on how it works:

2. Click “Accept” on the next page. This page simply provide details regarding your privacy rights and the NSLDS’s security measures, as you’ll be entering sensitive information - like your username and FSA ID - into their system. They want to assure you their website has a safe and secure online setup.
You may log in to the system by entering your username or email address, and the same password that you used in order to sign your FAFSA (also referred to as your FSA ID). Once both are entered, click “Login” and you’ll be in!

Please note: If you need to create or edit your FSA ID, you may do so by clicking on one of the two additional tabs on the log-in screen.

You can now view your profile, including all federal loans and grants in your name. It’s important to note that this summary isn’t all inclusive; if you also have private loans, they will not be listed on NSLDS. Additionally, parent PLUS loan information will appear in your parents’ NLSDS account, not yours. You will need to tally these debts separately.

Under your profile, you may click on the number to the left of each loan to view the details associated with each loan (see below for more info). Keep in mind that each of your loans may have a different servicer, so never assume they’re all the same – be sure to familiarize yourself with each of your loans individually.
Now that you’re looking in more detail at each individual loan, you can see which type of loan it is, the current status (i.e. in grace period, in repayment, loan originated, etc.), the principal amount of the loan, and you can also investigate any interest that has accumulated.

You can also view the “Current Servicer” of your loan. This is who you will contact for any questions regarding that particular loan, or to discuss repayment options. Many student borrowers aren’t aware that their loan servicers are often willing to proactively work with them to provide a multitude of repayment options to help prevent default. Just remember – their contact information is just a few clicks away, don’t hesitate to reach out to negotiate all of your options!

Paying off your student loan debt can feel like a long and complicated process. But by harnessing useful tools like NSLDS, it is easier than ever for student borrowers to keep tabs on the details of their loans so they may repay their debts successfully. Be sure you log on today to get started!
